Is your workforce familiar with basic fire safety?

A fire in a workplace can be devastating, leading not only to the destruction of company premises but also to the loss of jobs, business revenue and even lives. Businesses are required by law to provide fire safety training. The law applies to you if you are responsible for business premises, an employer or self-employed with business premises, a charity or voluntary organisation or a contractor with a degree of control over any premises.

Who is basic fire safety training for?

Do you know what the fire triangle is? What the principles of fire safety are? Who is in charge if a fire breaks out? If you run a business and you don't know the answers to these questions, you could be breaking the law. If you can't answer these questions, this course is for you.

What does the basic fire safety course cover?

The basic fire safety course explores:

- The legal aspects of fire safety regulations.
- How risk assessments can help to prevent fires.
- Signs and procedures that need to be in place to prevent fires.
- Steps that must be taken to contain a fire.

What is the benefit of basic fire safety training to your business?

Basic fire safety training is invaluable: training can prevent one of the worst disasters that any company can endure. Prevention is the key and our courses are designed to help businesses fulfil their legal obligations as well as help ensure the safety of their employees and visitors. Staff can complete their training at any time to suit your needs.
